Job Title: Director of Product Management

Job Description and Key Responsibilities

You will collaborate with our development and marketing team to bring new products to market. You will be responsible for making product deadlines during all phases of product development and commercial launch. You will monitor product budgets and report the product progress to the company on a regular basis.

This position requires careful attention to detail and deadlines. Progress and set-backs must be evaluated clearly and communicated accurately to team members involved. You will be responsible for coordinating schedules, deadlines and budgets with partner companies and third-party vendors. You will also be responsible for generating several reports, including detailed production schedules.

Thrive in a fun, fast-paced, informal working environment? To this end, you should be highly self-directed and capable of forming close collaborative working relationships. Excellent oral and written communication skills are a must.

Required Qualifications

- Extensive experience in software sales and distribution, at retail, online and on-site.
- Experience in music distribution, sales and marketing.
- Direct experience with traditional commercial channels of distribution.
- Extensive familiarity with media industry and IP-driven products.
- Strong record of communication management, within teams and across departments.
- Familiarity with online product sales through multiple, simultaneous channels.
- Experience managing relationships with designers, manufacturers, distributors and other third-parties.
- Outstanding ability to perform innovative research to expand the company's reach among consumers, retailers and editorial outlets.

Desired Qualifications

- Working relationships with editorial outlets: broadcast, print or online.

- Familiarity with budget management and financial forecasting.
- Ability to communicate with ease in and among technical and commercial environments.

Education Requirements

Bachelors Degree, plus experience in a related field

This position is full-time, working in the Research Triangle Park in North Carolina. Excellent pay, stock options, and competitive benefits.
